

SANTI ROSINA

Brand & Style Guide

SANTA BARBARA · CALIFORNIA — FIRST EDITION

Italian soul, Santa Barbara ground

Santi Rosina is a family winery in Santa Barbara County, raising Italian varietals under a long California sun. Everything the brand touches should feel the way the house does: unhurried, honest, and meant to be shared around a crowded table.

The design language is a dinner after dark: cinematic shadow, aged paper, a dusty rose, and a thread of old gold.

PILLAR I

Family before everything

First person plural, always. The brand speaks as a household, not a company.

PILLAR II

Unhurried by design

Small lots, short lists, slow releases. Nothing shouts; nothing rushes.

PILLAR III

Italy, planted in California

Italian character lives in the type, the palette, and the varietal names — never in translation.

SANTI ROSINA

PRIMARY WORDMARK · JOST MEDIUM, TRACKED +0.40EM

CLEARSPACE

Keep clear space around every mark at least equal to the cap-height of the wordmark's "S". Nothing enters the ring of the stamp.

MINIMUM SIZES

Wordmark: 32 mm print / 180 px screen. Stamp: 14 mm / 64 px. Monogram roundel: 8 mm / 36 px.

COLOR & MISUSE

Ivory or gold on Nero; ink on Carta. Never recolor outside the palette, add effects, stretch, or set the wordmark in any face but Jost (tracked) with Bodoni reserved for the SR monogram.

Nero di Notte

HEX 171310
RGB 23 · 19 · 16
CMYK ≈ 0 · 17 · 30 · 91
Dark grounds, heroes, footers

Carta

HEX F4EEE3
RGB 244 · 238 · 227
CMYK ≈ 0 · 3 · 7 · 4
Editorial sections, paper

Rosa Antica

HEX B4766B
RGB 180 · 118 · 107
CMYK ≈ 0 · 34 · 41 · 29
The signature accent, from “Rosina”

Oro Antico

HEX C2A265
RGB 194 · 162 · 101
CMYK ≈ 0 · 16 · 48 · 24
Hairlines, rules, the stamp — never fills

Cipresso

HEX 50543F
RGB 80 · 84 · 63
CMYK ≈ 5 · 0 · 25 · 67
Supporting green, sparingly

Nero II

211B16 · raised dark panels

Carta II

ECE3D2 · deeper cream bands

Rosa Profonda

96584E · accents on cream

Avorio

F1E9DB · text on dark

Inchiostro

26201B · text on cream

Working proportions. The brand alternates deep Nero and Carta cream in large fields; Oro and Rosa appear only as details — a hairline, an eyebrow, a chip. CMYK values are conversions for reference; confirm with press proofs.

Jost

A geometric sans in the Futura tradition of Italian modernist posters. Light 300 carries body copy; Medium 500, set in capitals and tracked wide (+0.26 to +0.36em), carries every label, eyebrow, button, and navigation item.

EYEBROW — 8PT · +0.36EM · ROSA

Body — 10.5pt Jost Light, 1.7–1.8 line height. Buttons — hairline border, caps, generous padding.

THE HIERARCHY

Every page speaks
in this order

A Bodoni italic line warms the entrance.

Then Jost Light settles in to do the quiet work of explanation, never louder than the room requires, always with air around it.

THEN ONE INVITATION

Eyebrow → title → double rule → italic lede → body → a single call to action. One hierarchy, everywhere — web, print, labels.

Dusk and candlelight

Golden hour or after; warm shadow over gloss; texture over perfection. Land, cellar, pour, and table — always with a trace of people or their work. Grade toward the palette: amber highlights, rosy midtones, near-black warms.

Warm, unhurried, first person plural

“Wines with an Italian soul, raised under the Santa Barbara sun.”

“The cellar is small on purpose. The list is short on purpose.”

“We didn’t choose between Italy and California. We planted one inside the other.”

“Three pours a year. Never rushed.”

Speak as the family

We, us, our table. Never “the company,” never “users” or “customers” — guests, members, friends.

Short declaratives

Two short sentences beat one long one. Full stops are furniture; use them.

Italian in names only

Varietals, places, and Rosina herself carry the accent. Everything else is English — no translations, no phrasebook.

Invite, don't promote

No urgency, no discounts language, no exclamation marks. The brand saves a seat; it never sells one.
